

Bonnie _____

Nicol
McGuire

(

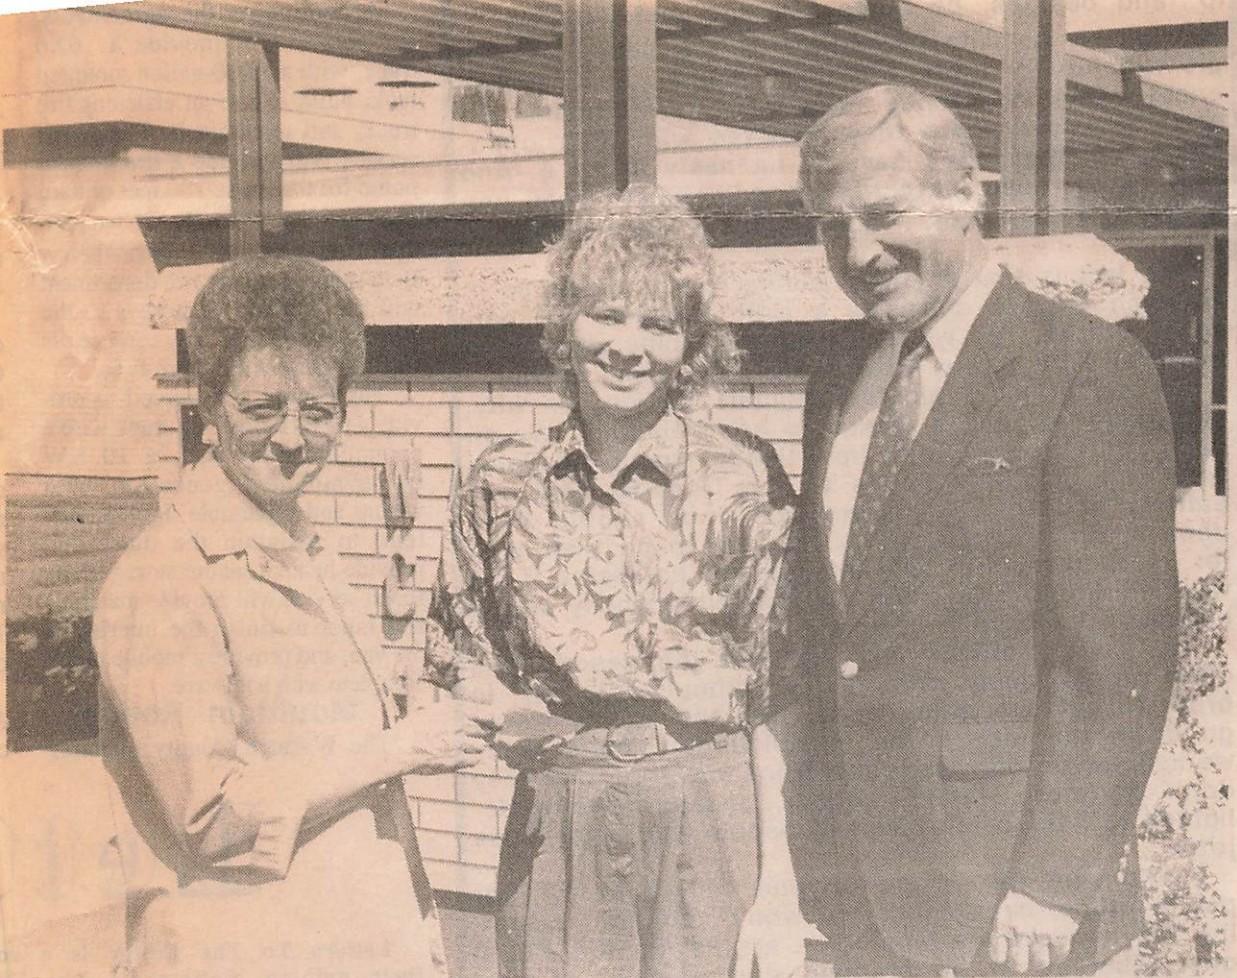

Na. 102

Sharon McDonald, director of Volunteers at IHC

Wasatch County Hospital, presents a $5,000 check to Administrator Wayne Terry.

Q2/

Glenna Smith, director of the Wasatch County Hospital Pink Ladies, presents a $500 scholarship to Kim Shumway, while Wayne Terry, IHC administrator of the hospital, looks on. The Pink Ladies raise money for the scholarship through fundraisers and sales from their gift shop for students pursuing health care careers. Kim worked as an aid at the hospital before enrolling at Weber State University.

9-12-90

What we need to know from all the imperfect people running for office are their qualifications, experience, views on issues, solutions to problems. We need to know where they disagree with their constituents, but they don't have to be nasty about it. They don't need unrequested assistance from supporters who think it might help to spice things up a bit.

The fact is that anybody willing to run for office in Wasatch County deserves a little respect, not personal attacks. The winners may gain some status and impressive titles, but most of the jobs aren't so hot.

No matter what elected officials decide, or why, somebody will find a reason to gripe about it. We sit back and theorize about how things should be done, send our elected officials to the front to fight our battles, and then tell them how they should have done it. It's not easy when they try to do their best for us, then have to take our guff for not doing it the way we would have. We're surprised anybody would campaign for such a position.

The county offices with full-time job descriptions often require many extra hours, without extra pay, in order to get everything done. And the county would go down the tube if the so-called part-timers really worked for us only part-time. Then we gripe that they don't do more, faster, sooner, cheaper. We're delighted to have a full ballot of people who want those jobs.

That's why we admire anyone willing to run for public office, even those we won't vote for, assuming they understand what they are asking for. Not a one deserves to be stabbed and bled in a dirty political fight.

We hope to hear lively debates around town about issues and qualifications. But we hope the candidates will point out to their campaigners that when mud gets slung around, it splatters all over everything. We also hope the grapeviners will show a little respect for the people who live here.

According to the agreements, the county will provide a 6X6 truck, with a 1,000-gallon mounted tank, build it into an efficient fire truck, and maintain it. The forest service will provide a mechanical pump for the truck, 200 feet of hard line hose with a nozzle, a hose reel, and heated storage at Strawberry. Berg said the county fire department will be provided with keys to the storage building so they can use the truck to put out structure fires.

The county also agreed to provide a 6X6 firefighting truck with a communications van, a 10 KW trailer-mounted generator, with wiring and a portable lighting system, to maintain the unity and provide heated, secure storage. The forest service will provide materials and labor to finish the interior of the van, and provide a mobile radio, complete with hardware.

Mountain Roads

The Wasatch County planning

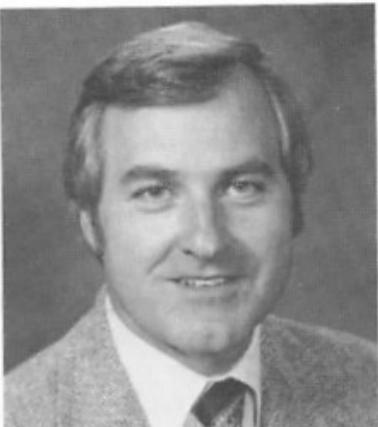

Let

Letters To The Editor is a column giving their opinion. Letters To The Editor must be received by MONDAY NOON, and must include the name and address of the writer. Names of writers are limited to one letter per month. Preference will be given to typewritten (double spaced) letters. Please include the writer's name. All letters subject to editorial review. Address: THE HERALD, EDITOR, P.O. BOX 128, HEREFORD.

Insights on IHC People

(Continued from Page 9)

WAYNE T. TERRY,
assistant administrator at Utah Valley Hospital for the past four years, has been appointed administrator of Wasatch County Hospital. Terry began his hospital management career at LDS Hospital in 1965 as manager of employment services. He joined the Utah Valley staff in 1973 as director of human resources and was later appointed assistant administrator. Terry holds both a BA and a MPA from Brigham Young University. He is a board member of the American Red Cross Central Utah Chapter, and a member of many other voluntary organizations. He was instrumental in organizing the first Hospice program in Utah County.

PAUL RADER, director of biomedical engineering at McKay-Dee Hospital Center, has accepted the position of area service coordinator for the northern region for IHC's Technical Services Division. He will continue his work at McKay-Dee while assuming his new responsibilities. Rader has a BS in electrical engineering from Weber State College.

WILLIAM V. ROSQVIST

has been advanced to the position of director of data processing for IHC Affiliated Services, Inc. He has served as data processing marketing representative for ASI for the past year and a half. Rosqvist previously worked in sales and marketing for

